NATIVE SENTIMENT.

The resolutions which passed at the royalist meeting last night were written by white and half-white demagogues who are in daily contact with the "Queen" and some of whom live upon her pay. They represent the desire of the most worthless class of island politicians—the tricksters, the bootlappers and the thieves—to regain the power which they misused and the opportunities upon which they wreaked their instincts of dishonesty and greed. As for there being any patriotism at the bottom of these resolutions, the mere idea is suggestive of a joke. The only patriotism known to John E. Bush and his ilk is that which has been described as the last refuge of a scoundrel. So far as the natives are concerned they are in favor of annexation with the proviso that they shall have the suffrage. It is the threat, made in hot blood during the revolution and used as a political canard by the "Queen's" party, to reduce the kanakas to the political level of the Chinese, which is leading them to side with a Queen whom they have always despised and with leaders who have uniformly betrayed their interests for private gain. Once let the impression go out that the United States would treat them justly and give their grievances a patient hearing and a wise remedy, and there will be no native Hawaiians left to waste even their abundant time and good nature upon such men as are the three who spoke to them last night and the five or six others who, at the instance of Mrs. Dominis, seek to arraign them against the only form of government which could make them prosperous in purse and potential in affairs. The United States may be sure that no loyalty to the "Queen" would stand in the way of their adhesion to the Union. They have no sentiment even so moderate as personal liking for the deposed sovereign. To them she represents nothing more sacred than the fruits of a usurpation. By the aid of the foreigners, her family turned the Kamehamehas out of power and by the use of bribes induced a servile and dishonest legislature to put it on the throne. To say that the natives oppose annexation on her account, or because she is "beloved" by them as a conscientious and popular ruler, is a miserable absurdity. The majority of them would rather have her with all her faults and weaknesses than to be reduced to serfs and chattels; but once the latter idea is out of their heads and they have no more interest in her than they will in the Queen of the Senegambians.

THE ROYALIST LEADERS.

It will pay Colonel Blount to delve into the antecedents of the men who are coming to him on behalf of the expelled Queen. They are the leaders who would now be in power if royal rule had not been brought to an end, and who stand for the sort of public and private morals which the "Queen" wishes to perpetuate with the aid and favor of the United States. They are the same sort of men with the same pursuits and ambitions, that made themselves painfully familiar to Colonel Blount and his gallant compatriots in the southern politics of 1866 to 1874. We do not doubt that he will know the breed at sight. He cannot mistake it, either from its personality or from the evidence which the musty records of the law courts will afford him. No doubt these royalist politicians presume upon Col. Blount's lack of acquaintance with them. It is their hope and would be their prayer if they were a praying instead of a preying kind, that he may not find them out. They trust that he will shut his eyes and mistrust the evidence of his nose—but he won't. You can rely upon a Georgia statesman to recognize the class which runs politics for plunder, apes patriotism for what there is in it and knows no higher rule of official arithmetic than addition, division and silence.

The cheek of John E. Bush would cast a shadow on the moon. Here is a man who pretended to be an annexationist in the last Legislature and beguiled money out of people to further that cause. More than this he carried on a paper which opposed the Queen and called for union with America. Since his return from the coast, however, he has been the other way and is now engaged in rousing the natives in favor of the monarchy. The United States Commissioner should understand that Bush is a most pestiferous demagogue whose views on any subject have no political consequence and could be changed for a dollar.

There were three crows sat on a tree,
Ful-lah! ful-lah!
And they were black as crows could be,
Ful-lah! ful-lah!
The name of one was Bush, John E.
Another's name was Nawali,
And Johnny Cummins made the three,
Ful-lah! ful-lah!
Said one black crow unto his mate,
Ful-lah! ful-lah!
What shall we do for grub to eat,
Ful-lah! ful-lah!
They spied a Queen then passing by,
Just loaded down with treasure pie,
And quickly caught her on the fly,
Ful-lah! ful-lah!
The three black crows said to the Queen,
Ful-lah! ful-lah!
This is the softest thing we've seen,
Ful-lah! ful-lah!
You give us what meat pie we need,
And for your cause we'll crow indeed,
Till annexation none will heed,
Ful-lah! ful-lah!
The compact with the Queen was struck,
Ful-lah! ful-lah!
The three black crows were dead in luck,
Ful-lah! ful-lah!
And so last night on Palace Square,
The darksome birds mused up the air,
And croaked of patriotism fair
For pie! for pie!

If these islands go into the United States the native Hawaiian will get the privileges, the immunities and all the rights of American citizenship. All that the Queen offers him is a flag which never has protected him and a royalty which would again go into eclipse. As an American, the native might hold up his head and look even England in the face, secure in the faith that no power is great enough to insult or oppress him. As a subject of a powerless crown, he would be the spoil of any covetous nation which might find an open chance to occupy his land.

WHAT has come over the spirit of John E's dream? A little time ago he was abusing the Queen in language that could not go into print without a blush. His newspaper, Ka Leo, was bristling with annexationist doctrine. Now we find him a shouter for the monarchy, with love of the scepter in his heart and a crown blown in the neck of his bottle. Is it a case of In hoc signo vinces?

As an American no native would "take a back seat." He could vote for something besides lower house representatives then. It is being a subject of a Queen and of a boodling ministry that would make him a serf and a pariah.

Nobody objects to "government by the people." It is government by a clique of carpet-baggers and bootlappers, to which decent men object. Of such was the Kingdom of the Dominis.

ONE Queen in the pack and Heaven knows how many knaves.

Good politics need no Bush.

PERSONAL.

P. H. Ophergelt was sent to the insane asylum yesterday.
Editor Godfrey expects to be absent on the Coast for six months.
Postmaster General Hill, who was announced to be seriously ill some time ago, is slowly recovering.
Mr. J. G. Rothwell, secretary of the Honolulu Post Office, has charge of that institution during Mr. Hill's illness.

Hon. E. C. Macfarlane, who accompanied the ex-Queen's Commissioners to Washington, is expected by the arrival of the steamer Alameda on her next through trip.
Miss Krout, the Chicago Inter Ocean's correspondent will remain here another month. She is doing excellent work for the Provisional cause and is a favorite socially.

R. J. Greene who has been placed in charge of the Palace and grounds will begin his duties to-morrow. He will probably be assigned quarters in the basement of the Palace.
Mrs. George Beckley wishes the STAR to state that she did not lead the delegation of Hawaiian women which marched to the wharf when the Rush came in and that she is not interesting herself in politics.

Joseph Marsden who has been appointed Secretary of the Board of Agriculture and Forestry, has opened an office with Wray Taylor in the rooms of the Board of Immigration, where he can be found hereafter.

At a meeting of the Annexation Club, held yesterday, it was determined to organize a branch to be called the Junior Members' Club. This step has been taken on account of the many applications made by minors for membership in the regular organization. The roll of the Club now numbers over 1900 names and continues to steadily increase.
